

ABSTRACT

A liquid crystal display device in which a pair of substrates having electrodes face each other, and liquid crystal is sealed between the substrates.

- 5 The liquid crystal display device includes a insulating layer that varies electric field orientations in a pixel region when a voltage is applied between the pair of substrates.